Conferences!

Ever wonder how many robotics conferences are out there?

I (may) have the answer

Awesome Robotics Conferences List

- A curated list of all robotics conferences, to understand where do you want to publish your next paper (or where you just want to see other people papers)
- Updated from various reliable sources like, robotics mailing lists (robotics worldwide, eurobotics), IEEE website, so reliable enough

| Note The objective is to assess the fundamentals of mobile robotics while offering insights into recent advancements in the field and innovative applications. The scientific program of the school brings together leading figures in control engineering and robotics, providing an exceptional opportunity to present their latest results and identify emerging areas of research.   |  |            |           |           |               |             |         |

| Note The school is an official initial initiative of the Italian PhD in Robotics and Intelligent Machines ( https://drim.i-rim.it/en/ ), and it is open to all the PhD students passionate about the field. In 2023, 69 international students attended the first edition, and the school offered 52 hours of didactic activities. The multidisciplinary and hands-on structure of the School, highly appreciated by the attendants in 2023, is a one-of-kind opportunity for the attendees to see robotics from a wider point of view. This year, the Scientific Committee is comprised of 13 members, with great team diversity in terms of cultural background, universities, and regional distribution, aiming to provide a top-class education. |  |            |           |           |               |             |         |

| Note Rising interest in non-holonomic mechanical systems has initiated a large body of research that exploits what is often called 'non-holonomic' geometry. More precisely the geometric setting is that of (principal) bundles, which serve as configuration space, and the connection on the bundle plays a key role as it encodes constituent kinematic and dynamic relations. This not only provides a beautiful holistic approach to multi-physical systems it also gives rise to consistent compact and efficient computational formulations for complex systems.   |  |            |           |           |               |             |         |

About

I created this half for fun and half for learning something new. Double check on official conferences/school website for the correct/updated information (and if you find some wrong info here, please open a PR/issue :D)
